It said the president's meeting in Damascus last night with Fateh Central Committee members Ahu Iyad and Abu Saleh lasted more than five ho-urs and covered current Palestinian and Arab issues.

scuss it with the Israelis. In view of tha amicable relations between the Soviet Union and the PLO, this was an area in which the Russians could play a constructive role in achieving a settlement, they said.

The Middle East question was the original reason for the Vance-Gromyko meeting, beg-inning at the Soviet mission bere this afternoon.

Talks on the goals for a new Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) agreement are first on the agenda, hut U.S. officials said they expected little prog-ress on the subject this week.

Mr. Vance's suggestions on the Middle East appear in part to be an attempt to parry an expected Soviet demand that the United States put pressure on Israel to reach a settlement.

Westero diplomatic sources said Soviet insistence that an agreement could be reached only if the U.S. applied press-ure to Israel had rendered many previous discussions on the Middle East fruitless. This time the U.S. wanted to stress that the Rossians could also play a constructive role. Up to now, the United Sta-tes, like Israel, has insisted that > Mr. Vance also plans to suggest to Mr. Gromyko that the United States and Soviet Union have a regular exchange of views on the Middle East.

The officials said Middle East negotiations would have to be conducted among the par-ties to the dispute and not between the two outside powers, which are co-chairmen of the Geneva conference.

But it would be useful to have regular meetings instead of the previous ad hoc encounters.

Meanwhile, Mr. Vance and Mr. Gromyko, began talks here today on the stalled strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) negotiations.

The meeting opened in a conference room in a villa in the grounds of the Soviet diplomatic mission here, shortly after the two ministers signed an agreement renewing a 1972 peace cooperation pact between the countries.

NATO defence ministers agree to increase defence spending

BRUSSELS, May 18 (Agencies). ---- NATO defence ministers to-day announced agreement to increase alliance defence spending to counter a military huild-up by the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies.

In a communique following a two-day session of alliance de-fence ministers, they said they expressed their concero the ateady expansion of Soviet military capabilities which bav egreatly increased the power of Warsaw Pact forces."

The ministers noted that the Warsaw Pact forces bad become increasingly offensive in posture and were capable of projecting Soviet power throughout the world.

said. U.S. Defence Secretary Harold Brown told a press conference that more defence spending would "enable the alliance to deter a Soviet military threat and prevent the Soviet Union gaining a political advan-tage by intimidation because of

But American officials said they seriously doubted there would be significant progress during the expected three days of talks here between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

They resumed discussions begun in Moscow in March when the Kremlin bluntly rejected new U.S. proposals. Both sides now indicate they are looking to the other to end the deadlock.

Mr. Vance's press spokesman, reading what he said was essentially a joint statement, told correspondents the two men had spent two and a half bours reviewing the SALT issue and

A face-lift for Likud

The rightwing Likud bloc had no sooner received positive indication that it was about to emerge as the largest single party in Israel following the general elections on May 17 than it started to construct a more flattering and less hawkish image abroad, a face-lift as it were.

The powers that be in Likud are no doubt aware that Mr. Menachem Begin, who led the party to victory, and was a big vote-getter in Israel does not look quite the same from the outside. To the British and the Arabs, in fact to a large section of the world at large, Mr. Begin is a one-time leader of the underground Irgun organisation which blew up the King David Hotel in Jerusalem, killing a hundred people at one go. In the words of Israel's founding father, Ben Gurion, he is an 'outlaw.' He is also the frenzied orator in the Knesset who has not left any doubt in anyone's mind as to his opposition to giving back the occupied West Bank - - which automatically rules him out as a viable peace negotiator with the Arabs. The Americans, for one, would be deeply embarrassed if they had to back such a man.

There is a strong possibility that Mr. Begin could single-handedly establish to the remaining sceptics in the world at large that Israel is responsible through its intransigence for the lack of progress towards peace.

To ward off this possibility, the Likud bosses are trying to avoid forming a purely rightwing coalition, for that would let the cat out of the bag. Instead, they are sounding out the Labour Party, the big loser in the elections, but still in command of a quarter of the votes in the Knesset, to see if a centre-right coalition can we worked out.

At the same time, Mr. Begin's aides are going around saying that he had not been serious all along in ruling out withdrawal from the West Bank. They are putting it about that Likud never maintained a "we will not give up one square inch" policy -- although factions within Likud clearly still maintain tbat attitude.

Added to this, Mr. Begin's aides are saying that the first act of a Likud dominated government will be to issue a call to the leaders of the neighbouring Arab states to meet immediately with Israel for peace talks.

Mr. Begin, former guerrilla chief, could be Israel's next premier the ninth he bas succeeded. When polling began yester-day he was confident Israeli voters would at last choose his rightwing Likud alliance as an alternative to the Labour Party which he declared had "fallen asleep at the wheel." The pre-election Labour Party campaign described Mr. Begin and his party as drivera who had failed their test eight times and should not be granted a licence on their ninth attempt. Mr. Begin did not allow a heart attack about two months ago to interfere with his per-sonal electioneering. His last major public appearance, in a television debate with acting Prime Minister Shimon Peres 48 hours before the poll, showed him alert, but looking somewhat drawn.

Within the Knesset, Mr. Begin is regarded by both poli-tical friends and foes as a brilliant but often naive ora-

Yet he was the man who commanded the clandestine Ir-gua Zvai Leumi (National Military Organisation) in the last years of the British mandate which ended in Palestine in 1948.

Israel's founding father David Ben Gurion denounced him as an "outlaw".

From hideouts in the back street hotels in Tel Aviv, Mr. Begin directed the Irgun in terrorist operations that included blowing up a wing of Jer-usalem's King David Hotel, then the headquarters for much of the British military command. One bundred people were killed in that operation.

the Irgun. He has led Israel's main opposition with an iron hand ever since.

His party's alignment with two other rightwing splinter groups to form the Likud bloc in September 1973 created the second largest parliamentary group, which was a constant threat to former Prime Minis-ter Yitzhak Rabin's fragile Labour-led coalition.

Likud, a Hebrew word which can be loosely translated as "Unity", is dominated by Mr. Begin's Herut Pany.

The oarty platform says a government led by Likud would agree to withdraw from parts of territory captured in Si-nai and the Golan Heights from Egypt and Syria in the June 1967 war.

But it would refuse to make any concessions in regard to the West Bank and firmly rejects the idea of establishing Palestinian state beside Israel.

The Likud calls for the encouragement of private businesses as part of a plan to cure israel's running inflation.

It also stresses the need for limiting the power of the strong Labour-dominated Hista-drut trades union federation, which owns much of Israel's heavy industry.

The party has said a Likudled government would be able to conviace Washington that Israel should be a strong fortress against communist penetration in the Middle East.

Mr. Begin, carefully groom-ed, using his fiery, at times frenzied oratorical powers to considerable effect, lashed out in parliament for years against what he called the governme-nt's "dovish" policies,

Strive for the best..... rival those of Calro and Belrul. Amman would no longer have to strive to be the best And city in one field or another. It would show off the Third Circle as the finest Arab chaon It seems that part of the developmental drive throughout the Middle East means that every country will become the leader in some field or another. For example, Bahrain seeks to be found anywhere between Morocon to become the banking centre of the Middle East. Saudi Arabia wants to be the petroche-

Arab World's great food producer. Dubai wants to be the drydock capital for shipbuilding and repairing. This idea stuck in my mind the other day, as I was taking one of my regular mind-ref-reshing strolls around the Third Circle. I thought it was a good thing that Arab countries now strive to develop expertise in certain areas, but I thought it unfair for all this development to take place without something simi-lar happening here in Jordan. After a few minutes of walking around the Third Circle area, an idea came to me. Why not have a similar specialisation here in Amman, and also combine this with the very important desire of most of us to preserve the historical treasures and cultural values of Arab civilisation? So I have another suggestion: The Third Circle should be developed into the chaos capital of the Middle East. Chaos ("fawda" in Arabic) is an integral part of Arab life. But as we become more technologically developed, we are in danger of leaving our chaotic ways behind us, and I think this is unfair to our children. The concept of fawda is part of every Arab's heritage and personality, and I think we have a unique but fleeting chance these days to combine the best of our chaotic ways with the new technological advances of the modern society that is springing up all around us. The Third Circle is an ideal place to turn into the Chaos Capital of the Arab World. For example, on the traffic level, we have opportunities to stage traffic jams around the circle that could last for entire weeks. All we'd need to do is put up a few more traffic signs and some lights to turn today's level of routine centre of the circle, so young men and women could arrive in their sports cars and drive around and around the circle to look at each other. The traffic jams that would result would India's Congress Party faces crucial test of survival as defections tear it apart

NEW DELHI, May 18 (R). - The Indian National Congress Party, with fresh defections from its ranks every day, faces a crucial test of survival in state elections next month. The once-mighty organisa-tion which governed India for 30 years after independence in 1947 has been torn apart since its shattering defeat in general elections last March.

Voting takes place in 10 of the country's 22 states between June 10 and 14. At present the Congress Party is more deeply divided than ever and political observers predict another major polls debacle.

There has been a mass

Legislative Assembly members. In addition, the Congress Party government in far northeastern Mizoram resigned a year before its term of office was over.

The Chief Minister of India's newest state, Kazi Lhendup Dorli of Sikkim, announced that the Congress organisation there was moving over en bloc to the Janata Party.

The Congress had earlier lost control of the Tripura Assembly and its government in the key northeastern state of Assam seems on the verge of collapse. Thirteen Congress members of the Assam Assembly have resigned in the past the Congress Working Com-mittee, the party's high com-mand, under Mr. Reddy and said he would not contest the state elections.

He said he felt "totally out of tune with many of those who still control our great party today." The "coterie of persons who stand indicted before the people" were still in control, he added.

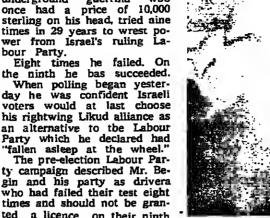

The June 10-14 polling will be in the main north and central Indian states where the Congress was totally routed in the national elections.

Mr. Menachem Begin,

When the manhunt gained momentum in the years 1945-47, Mr. Begin often evaded his pursuers by hiding behind secret trapdoors, even disgui-sed as an orthodox rabbi.

The bitter feud between Mr. Begin and Mr. Ben Gurion carried over into the Knesset to which Mr. Begin was elected in 1949, after the disbanding ol the 3,000-member Irgun. But when Mr. Ben Gurion died in 1973, Mr. Begin was one of the chief mourners at his funeral, both men -- statesman and underground chlef -having acknowledged the role of the other in founding the new state of Israel. Mr. Begin, born in August 1913 in Brest-Litovsk, then part of Poland but now in the Soviet Union, took a law degree al Warsaw University in the

This is all too pat and has a distinctively false ring to it. If Likud is ready to give up one or two square inches, in the West Bank or even vast tracts of the Sinai desert, that will not help much. Is Mr. Begin ready to stand up and say he is prepared for substantial and meaningful concessions for the sake of peace? Is there anything to lead the Arab leaders to believe that if they responded to his call there would be anything to talk about? The whole thing looks very much like a gambit to win world sympathy. Besides, doesn't this very conveniently gloss over the Palestinians altogether?

Mr. Begin is in the position of a Leopard claiming to have changed its skin overnight -- almost miraculously as it were. It lacks credibility.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

The Israeli general election is the main topic discussed editorially by local newspapers. The papers reflect the belief that it would not lead to any change in the Israeli attitude to the Middle East crisis.

AL RA'I says that as far as "we are concerned, the prime importance is how the Israelis will face the Arab peace offensive ... And proposed peace talks supposed to start by the end of this year."

Israel hates peace ... because peace would stop Israel befnre it could achieve two main objectives : First, the realisa-tion of the "Biblical prophecy" as they imagine it, outlined by Mr. Ben Gurion who says that the boundaries of Israel extend "from the Nile to the Euphrates", and the second is mou-lding an Israeli society by gath-ering Jews Irom around the world and convincing them after being brought to Palestine that they lace extermination by 100 million Arabs aro-und them" the paper says.

Carter rejects idea of trade barriers to keep out foreign cars

LOS ANGELES, May 18 (R). - President Carter yesterday rejected the idea of trade barriers to keep foreign cars out of the United States.

"I can think of no more disastrous assumption for the American automobile industry than that we cannot successfully compete with foreign companies that produce and sell such cars," Mr. Carter added.

He received a standing ovation from the auto union members when he decared: "We can compete and we will com-pete successfully."

"The solution lies in using our great American ingenuity to design and produce the right cars for the future," Mr. Carter said in a speech prepared for delivery to a convention of the United Auto Workers Union (UAW). The union had advocated the trade-barrier approach.

The president told the UAW delegates that they and he had "honest differences of opinion over some aspects" of his proposals for conserving energy.

extinction. Prince Abdorreza Pahlavi bas been in pursuit of the spectacled bear, an Andean Mountain species whose numbers, according to Peruvian conservationists, bave been re-duced to no more than 800 to i.000. The presidential decree, an-nounced in the official gazet-te, also allowed the 52-yearold Iranian prince to shoot a taruca, a rare Andean deer.

The capture and killing of botb the spectacled bear and taruca are banned and punisbable under normal Peruvian law.

Prince Abdorreza said an ar-rival here that he wanted the bear for exhibition in Tehran's natural science museum. A spokesman for the World Wildlife Fund in Morges, Switzerland, said that the WWF said the Iranian prince was given the go-abead after a meeting with President Morales Bermudez, in the course of which closer Iranian financial ties with Peru were promised.

Senor Felipe Benavides, a businessman and conservation-ist who has acquired an international reputation for his canapaign to save another rare Andean animal, the vicuna. from extinction, said:

"The prince has clearly used his position as one of the wor-ld's richest men to obtain a permit nobody else would get. If be kills that bear, I will declare him enemy number one of Peru."

The English language Lima Times magazine said Prince Abdorreza and Senor Benavldes exchanged bitter words when they met for dinner in Lima in early May. "I am a better conservation-ist than you are," the Iranian prince told Senor Benavides, according to the magazine.

"Even if he (the prince) does get to Lima with the dead bear no airline will touch it," Senor Benavides told the Times. "Under an international agreement, they are not allowed to carry pelts of endangered species. conservationists Peruvian say that if the prince so badly wants a spectacled bear for "cultural purposes", as the sp-eclal presidential decree stataruca. tes, why does he not capture one alive and ship it to a Three ycars ago, General Raul Castro, Cuba's Deputy Pr-emier. Defence Minister and brother nf President Fidel, visited Peru and was taken on a monkey hunt. Monkey hunting is also banned and there was a major outcry at the time.

"Not only did he hunt them, he also atc them," Senor Benavides angrily recalled. "Now we have an Iranian prince hunting our rarest species."

He described the bear as very beautiful, shy, difficult to find and a traditionally highly prized trophy for big game hunters.

A spokesman for the fauna preservation society in London said the numbers and distribution of the spectacled bear had been markedly reduced in Peru in recent years. The taruca, which was easy to hunt, had been completely wiped out at lower altitudes.

Prior to setting off to hunt in mountainous jungle east of the ancient Inca capital nf Cusco, Prince Andorreza denied that the spectacled bear faced extinction. He returned to Lima recently without having shot a hear. But be dld manage to kill a

French leftists' joint programme to be updated

PARIS, May 18 (AFP). --The three leaders of France's leftwing opposition alliance yesterday set up a working party to update their joint programme of government.

M. Francois Mitterrand of the Socialist Party, M. Georges Marchais for the Communists and M. Robert Fabre, leader of the Left Radical group, agreed at a "summit" meeting that the programme should be updated as soon as possible, in princi-ple by the beginning of the summer.

Legialative elections, which the left hopes it will win, are scheduled for next March at the latest. The original joint programme was first formulated by the three parties in 1972,

Participants at yesterday's meeting said they had not dis-cussed detailed figures of the third day of the United Naoons sponsored conference bere in support of Southern Af-

Cuba and the Soviet Union of being behind the March 8 invasion of Shaba by the former Katangese gendarmes. All three countries bave denied the charge.

> While Mr. Chao did not specifically name Cuba, his use of the word "mercenaries" clearly designated Cuban forces stationed in Angola.

Bracketing the United Sta-tes and the Soviet Union to-gether, Mr. Chao affirmed that rivalry between the superpowers and "social-imperialist ex-pansion" had considerably incr-eased the complexity of the Southern African situation.

Portugal determined on full ties with Israel

LISBON, May 18 (R). - Portugal said today it would not re-verse its decision to establish full diplomatic relations with Israel.

The Foreign Ministry bere released a communique following calls by Arab countries to Fortugal to either cancel or delay its recent decision to elavate diplomatic relations with Israel to ambassadorial level.

The communique said: "Reports have come to light about a possible delay in raising diplomatic relations between Portu-gal and Israel to ambassadorial level. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs ... reaffirms the Irreversibility of the decisions taken."

The ministry's note denied local press reports that the Egyptian ambassador to Portugal was received by Portuguese Foreign Minister Jose Medeiros Ferreira and added that such an audience had not been requested by the envoy.

Portugal'a minority Socialist government had announced in its programme when taking office a year ago that full diplomatic relations would be sought with all countries.

Djibouti plans to join Arab League

CAIRO. May 18 (AFP). -Djibouti, once independent, will join the Arab League, the United Nations and the Organisa-tion of African Unity (OAU) as a protection against foreign expansionist aims, Premier Ha-ssan Gouled said in an interview published today in the Cairo daily Al Abram.

"We regard our membership of these three organisations as a safeguard for nur tiny state which is coveted for its stra-tegic location," Mr. Gouled said.

He said Djibouti would follow a neutral policy towards its two neighbours Somalia and Ethiopia as the only mea-ns of protecting national unity and avoiding civil war.

Mr. Gouled's government is divided equally between Afa-rs, traditionally linked to Eth-iopia, and Somali-related Issas. Mr. Gouled said Djibouti would no longer tolerate Ethiopian sovereignty over certain Djiboutl Port facilities granted under an existing treaty with France.

"We want an amendment to the agreement concluded with Ethiopia because we will not permit the shipment of military equipment to Ethiopia in the event of war in the region," he said.

Mr. Gouled said Djibouti would have its own army made up largely of the 3,200 local soldiers now serving with the 11,000 strong French force in the territory. He said Djibouti would probbably retain between 2,000 and 2,500 French troops for "extemai" defence purposes for a limited period until the national army was properly organised. Mr. Gouled said this plan

The New China News Agen-cy (NCNA) recounted how close China'a largest city came to civil war in the tense 27 days last autumn between Chairman Mao's death and the arrest of the radical "gang of four" led by his widow Chiang Ching.

It said that on Sept. 28 Shanghai's Mayor Chang Chunchiao -- a member of the purged group -- issued "verbal mo-bilisation orders" to his follows there, stating "battle is imminent".

The million-strong Shanghai Militia was supposed to insti-gata the rebellion, NCNA said. The "gang's" followers in Shanghai "deployed army unit, set up secret command posts... and plotted to blow up bridges and stop water and electricity supplies in a counter-revolutionary armed coup," the agency added.

Privileged few will board Europe's legendary Orient Express on its last journey today

PARIS, May 18 (R). — When Europe's legendary Ori-ent-Express begins its last journey to Istanbul this week privileged travellers aboard the train will be carrying their own sandwiches and water.

The train favoured and glamorised for decades by aristo-crats, millionaires, diplomats and spies, bas long since been stripped of its cordon bleu restaurant and splendidly livered attendants.

The final Orient Express service leaving Paris tomorrow night will be distinctly modest compared with the days when the Europe to Asia express was called the "Train nf Kings". Clients in the "belle epoque" of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries included such personalities as Abdul Hamid, the Sultan of Turkey, He travelled with his harem and no ticket collector dared check the carriage specially hired fnr the wives.

King Leopold II of Belgium added to its lustre when be travelled in the train. The operating company, Compagnie des Wagons Lits, always added an extra car for his mistress Cleo de Merode.

Only one of the Express' car-riages has been travelling to Istanbul in recent years, and it is modern and mundane com-pared with the former opulence of velvet-lined coaches decorated with crystal chandeliers and orante furniture.

Some 300 enthusiasts begged the company for seats on the final run of the train whose aura of mystery attracted writers as a setting for spy-thril-lers, murder and romance.

The late Agatha Christie ("Murder on the Orient Express"), Mr. Ian Fleming ("From Russia with Love"), Mr. Graham Greene ("Stamboul Train"), and Mr. Paul Morand ("Madonna of the Sleeping Cars"), all embroidered tha legend,

For the last journey Wagons Lits wanted to add two or three sleeping cars, but French Railways, the overall authority, re-jected the request, invoking reasons to economy.

A carriage, known since 1962 as the "Direct-Orient", is the last relic of the Orient Express inaugurated in 1883. It is tag-ged onto a train headed for Belgrade. At the Yugoslav ca-pital it is detached and linked to another bound via Bulgaria for Istanbul's Sirkeci Station,

At the end of the 84-hour journey, the travellers alight-ing from the final Orient Express will find the fez has long since yielded to the cloth cap in Istanbul and horse-drawn carriages to exhaust-bleching motor-cars. But outside the main entrance to Sirkeci Station at least one monument atands to yesterday's more gracious meana of travel -- a splendid steam ocomotive.

In their hotel, as they recover from four days aboard the last trzin, they will find jet travellers who will have left Paris less than four hours earlier. It was Mr. Paul Morand who wrote in Paris-Match: "The Orient Express disappears, killed by the 100-seat airliner." And the great train's last customers will return home by of the four radicals -- Mme Chiang Ching, Mr. Chang Chun-chiao, Mr. Wang Hing-wen and Mr. Yan Wen-yuan - the plot was smashed. Not one of the six million bullets was fired, according to NCNA.

The account contained its previously unpublished allega-tions but said the radicals had devised a scheme to split the People'a Liberation Army "and lop off its leadership."

ft also looked more closely at Mr. Wang Hung-wens role, charging that after Chairman Mao's death he attempted to cut communications between Communist Party headquarters and Premier Hua Kuo-feng. Mr. Wang, who stood third in succession to Chairman Mao on the party ladder, had ordered the central office to refer important issues to him and not Mr. Hua. It added. This was an attempt to cut communications between the party Central Committee headed by Comrade Hua Kuofeng and the party Committees of the provinces, municipalities
